CHANGES AT ROUNDHOUSE

Are Expected After a Visit of the Railroad Officials

A visit of the railroad officials to this city on Monday is likely to be followed by some needed changes at this station.

Unofficially, it is said the changes will be on the roundhouse property, and will include practically a new house for locomotives, the moving of the coal sheds to a different location, a larger turntable, and a different location for the repair and work shops here.

This plan would relieve the company to a great extent, as it would do away with a trip over the Bartlett crossing every time a locomotive needs coal.

It is understood that part of the appropriation needed for the work is already available.

EASTMAN

DECLINES

To be a Candidate for Governor

Exeter, May 17.—The refusal of Attorney General Eastman to run for governor was announced last night. His letter, giving his decision, is made public as follows:

"To John Templeton, I. T. Pressy and F. S. Towle, Committee of the Republican Club:

"Permit me through you to most sincerely thank my fellow associates of the Rockingham county republican club for the highly complimentary resolutions in respect to myself passed at the meeting of the club held on May 5.

"To be governor of one's native state is indeed a very great honor, and to be unanimously requested to become a candidate for that office by you, with many of whom I have been intimately associated politically for more than 30 years, is evidence of a confidence on your part which is fully appreciated by me.

"I have carefully considered the request contained in your resolutions, together with like requests expressed to me personally and by letters from a very large number of leading republicans in every other county of our state, but for reasons which pertain principally to the duties of the office of attorney general and others purely personal to myself I have decided not to become a candidate at this time for the high office of governor of our state.

"You have well said that New Hampshire is a republican state, and it should and will so continue to be, provided the majority and not a few individuals are allowed to control party action.

"The direct primary law was enacted for the purpose of giving everybody desiring to hold a public office a chance, upon compliance with its terms, to fully and freely exercise the right to secure a nomination, and candidates seeking to avail themselves of its provisions should bear in mind that priorities and preemptions are not recognized by this statute and will not be claimed by fair minded men.

"In conclusion, I pledge myself to assist to the best of my ability in maintaining the spirit and effecting the results outlined at your meeting. Again thanking you for the very great compliment paid to me, and with a full belief that with a united effort the success of the republican party in New Hampshire is assured.

"I remain most sincerely yours,

"EDWIN G. EASTMAN."

POLICEMAN ARRESTED

Dover police Commission Has Bad Muddle on Hand

It looks to the outsider as if Dover police want to keep busy and when a quiet spell prevails there one officer goes out and arrests another.

This is the peculiar mix-up that occurred there Saturday night, and as a result, the police commission of that city are going to find out who is who and what is what.

A four round bout in the arena, led up to this queer stunt, when a special officer named Desortelle thought the thoroughfare was no place for a short arm jab and barn yard swings by two scrappers, and proceeded to carry out the law by placing the fighters under arrest.

Besides getting choked by one of the trio, he got arrested himself by a regular officer named Giroux.

The special officer made himself known, but his appeal was of no avail. "You are the fellow I want," said the regular officer, "and you can tell your troubles to the judge."

Why the arresting officer should let two fighters walk away, and hustle his brother officer to the den is hard to understand, say the Dover people, and it's up to the commission to find out who arranged the program that has caused more or less talk in the Cochecho city.

WHAT WE SAY IS SO

TO MAKE! EXHAUSTIVE TEST OF TRIAL COURSES

Boston, May 17.—Five members of the official Board of Inspection and Survey, headed by Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, arrived at the Charlestown navy yard on Monday from Washington to inspect and pass upon the final acceptance of the submarine boat Snapper, one of those built for the navy at the Fore River shipyards. Several hours were spent in looking over the little ship, which is tied between the two drydocks, and in going over certain records and papers, and it was announced at noon that the board would recommend the acceptance of the Snapper immediately, although the official time does not expire until May 22.

While repairs are being made on the craft, among other things replacing a cracked cylinder, and some slight changes are in progress, the Board found has found the ship in much better condition than usually is the case in such instances. The Washington officials went into the interior of the submarine, which is nearly all under water as she lies alongside the pier, and looked over all of her parts. Their recommendations will be forwarded to Washington after they have been prepared under the direction of the secretary of the Board. Late in the afternoon the board left for Rockland, Me., where a series of experiments, unlike any which have ever been tried in this country, will be held, and even with fairly favorable weather it will take about ten days to finish them. Five warships will be employed in conducting these experiments and the Board will be out on them for twenty-four hours or more at a time. The water over the Rockland course, which has been much used by warships having their trial trips in the past four or five years, measures from fifty to one hundred fathoms in depth. Off Provincetown, where the Navy Department has another course, the depth is from twenty-one to twenty-five fathoms, and off the Delaware breakwater, the third course, there is a depth of twenty to twenty-eight fathoms.

The Michigan, a new battleship of 16,000 tons displacement and 16,500 indicated horsepower, of the same class as the Vermont, now at the navy yard; the Smith Preston, Flusser and Reid, the fastest and most powerful torpedo boat destroyers in the navy, and among the world's speediest ships, are to be used for these experiments, but most of the tests will be with the Michigan, Flusser and Reid.

The object is to ascertain what effect the varying depths of water have upon the horsepower and speed of a ship, and to see if the size of the ship also bears on this matter. Similar tests have been conducted in England and Norway, but they were not exhaustive enough to satisfy this Government and so these experiments were ordered. Not only will the board spend ten days or so at Rockland, but it will then proceed to Provincetown and conduct similar experiments, and still later will go to the Delaware Breakwater course.

All of the statistics will be carefully tabulated and the board will make a full report to the Navy Department probably about July 1. Should the tests show that there is considerable "drag" when a ship is running at high speed over a course where the water is comparatively shallow, it may have considerable bearing upon the conduct of contract trials of warships and also will be of much service in emergencies when time saving is necessary and a deeper course may be equally available in reaching the given port or position at sea.

The board, besides Rear Admiral Thomas, president, comprises: Commanders Thomas Snowd, William S. Smith and Richard M. Hughes and Naval Constructor Robert Stocker.

KIRBY DISCHARGED BY BALLINGER

Washington, May 17.—Frederick M. Kirby, the stenographer whose statement on Saturday last brought from President Taft an acknowledgement of the accuracy of that young man's statements, was Monday discharged by Secretary Ballinger. This action, while inevitable under the circumstances, is generally taken also to be another step in the campaign of elimination in the Interior Department which Secretary Ballinger has characterized as "snake-killing." Now that President Taft has narrated with the utmost frankness the circumstances surrounding his preparation of the letter exonerating Ballinger and virtually admitting the accuracy of the statements made by Kirby, there is a disposition on all sides to dismiss the matter, so far as the President is concerned, with perhaps the suggestion that he might have used a little better judgment.

Had the Government officials involved made all the facts known at the beginning of the investigation the incidents would not have been regarded as seriously as they now are. It is not unusual for the President or other government officials to call upon subordinates to prepare letters for their signature. That is exactly what the President did when he was called upon to review the Glavis charge and a subordinate of the Secretary of the Interior, instead of some disinterested official, is regarded as unfortunate judgment, rather than indicating desire to have only Mr. Ballinger's side of the case. No one would have criticized the President had Attorney General Wickham prepared what has since become known as the Lawler letter. That the president has now assumed responsibility for the undating of the Attorney General's opinion is not deemed of importance. In fact there is a feeling of chagrin because the Administration persisted in shrouding in mystery incidents in connection with the Ballinger case, which became important only because of the determination to keep them under cover.

In dismissing Kirby "for the good of the service," Secretary Ballinger said that the stenographer was "unworthy to remain in it. The fact that your treachery," said the Secretary, "is futile cannot mitigate the character of your offence."

The text of the secretary's letter to Kirby is as follows:

May 16, 1910.

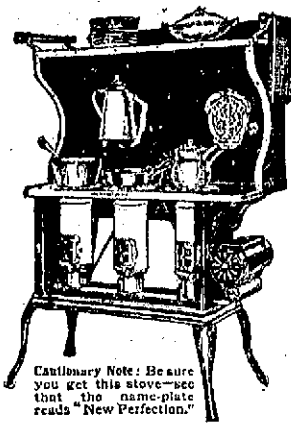

"Sir—You are hereby discharged from the public service because you are unworthy to remain in it. In divulging information obtained by you in the confidential relation of stenographer to the Secretary of the Interior,

A Maker of Good Clothes

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

Gives no outside heat, no smell, no smoke. It will cook the biggest dinner without heating the kitchen or the cook. It is immediately lighted and immediately extinguished. It can be changed from a slow to a quick fire by turning a handle. There's no drudgery connected with it, no coal to carry, no wood to chop. You don't have to wait fifteen or twenty minutes till its fire gets going. Apply a light and it's ready. By simply turning the wick up or down you get a slow or an intense heat on the bottom of the pot, pan, kettle or oven, and nowhere else. It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for coffee, teapot or saucepan, and even a rack for towels. It saves time, worry, health and temper. It does all a woman needs and more than she expects. Made with 1, 2, and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner sizes can be had with or without Cabinet.

Every dealer everywhere; if not at yours, write for Descriptive Circular to the nearest agency of the for, in communicating that information to those whom you are bound to know are wrongfully seeking to bring reproach upon the Administration and to injure me; and in deliberately misstating material facts as to which you treacherously communicate, you show that you are unworthy and unsafe. The fact that your treachery is futile cannot mitigate the character of your offence. For the good of the service you are hereby discharged.

"Respectfully,
(Signed) R. A. Ballinger, Sec'y.

HOUSES WITHOUT CHIMNEYS

If Santa Claus is as enterprising as he is represented to be he is very busy just about now developing a method of filling stockings without climbing down chimneys, because the electric light companies, electric engineers, manufacturers of electric specialties and other designing persons with electric axes to grind are doing their best to abolish the familiar flues that have so long served the benevolent purposes of the good saint. The house without chimneys has already appeared and its attractions are so alluring that it is like to be copied extensively.

Where chimneys are there dust and crime and soot and ashes and smoke and coal gas and toil and trouble and sour tempers and appalling bills are also. Any householder would be glad to get rid of these afflictions if he could retain the heat for the sake of which they are endured. That the heat and an almost endless list of other comforts and conveniences can be had without the chimney or any of its accompaniments in any home in which ordinary electric lighting current is available has been abundantly demonstrated. Indeed, the electrical experts have passed beyond the stage of showing that electric household appliances will work and are now busy making economy tests to establish their cheapness.

A citizen of Schenectady, New York, without waiting for the importunities of designing salesmen, built a handsome residence in which there was no chimney, furnace, register, radiator, baseburner, gas fixtures or cook stove. By making inquiries of the coal dealer, the contractor and the local electric light company and then doing a few simple sums in arithmetic he established the fact that electric heating, cooking and lighting appliances could be installed as cheaply as the usual room heating outfit and coal or gas ranges with their necessary chimneys, and that the cost of operation would be so low, or at least that any small increase would be more than offset by enhanced comfort and convenience. When this model electric home was described to the New York Electric Light Co., the fact was developed that it was by no means the only one of its kind.

Other houses at Schenectady and elsewhere have been heated successfully by electricity though some of them having been built before the advent of the electric era may have had coal fires, steam radiators and other relics of a less advanced civilization.

The following is an extract from "Running the Home by Electricity,"

Many Women who are Splendid Cooks dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.

EDWARD'S BODY IS REMOVED

Publicly Lying In State In Westminster Hall

AN IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY

Many Monarchs Walk In Procession From Buckingham Palace—Service In Presence of Royal Mourner Conducted by Bishop of Canterbury Before Public Is Allowed to Look Upon Face of Dead Sovereign

London, May 17.—The removal today of the body of the late King Edward from Buckingham palace to Westminster hall was attended by a spectacle scarcely less impressive than the funeral will be.

The cortege accompanying the body included the male royal mourners, lords in waiting and members of the royal households, who followed on foot the gun carriage bearing the coffin. King George was accompanied by the Duke of Cornwall and his two other sons.

Others who walked in the procession included the King of Denmark, the Duke of Connaught, the King of Norway, Prince Christian, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, Prince Andrew of Greece, the Duke of Teck, Prince Louis of Battenberg, the Duke of Fife, the Duke of Argyll, Prince Francis of Teck, Prince Alexander of Battenberg, Prince Maurice of Battenberg, Count Gleichen, Prince Alexander of Teck and Prince George of Battenberg.

Only nine carriages were in the procession. In the first was the queen mother, Alexandra, accompanied by Dowager Empress Marie Feodorovna of Russia and the Princess Royal.

Upon arrival at Westminster hall the late king's company of the Grenadier Guards, who had charge of the casket throughout the ceremony placed the body upon the catafalque for lying in state. All the regalia having been placed upon the casket the archbishop of Canterbury conducted a service in the presence of the royal mourners, after which the public lying in state began.

King George, Queen Mary, the queen mother and the royal family were present at a service over the body in the throne room at Buckingham palace. The scene in the throne room was deeply moving, one of the most impressive displays being the hourly change of guards, who in full uniform with hands crossed on reversed rifles and with heads bowed, stood like statues at each corner of the catafalque, with an officer in the same attitude facing the bier. Not a muscle was seen to move. At the end of each hour a bugler silently led the relieving guard in, and the change of guard was made noiselessly.

Colonel Roosevelt, accompanied by Ambassador Reid, called on King George at Marlborough house yesterday. The colonel's audience with the king was a lengthy one.

STOVE POLISH KILLED WIFE

Bereft Spouse Awarded $5000 In Suit Against Grocery Firm

Cambridge, Mass., May 17.—A $5000 verdict was returned by a jury in the superior court for Matthew Gately of Waltham, who brought suit against a Waltham grocery firm, following the death of his wife, which was alleged to have been caused by a package of stove polish purchased from the defendant concern.

During the trial it was brought out in evidence that the stove polish contained naphtha and that while Mrs. Gately was polishing the kitchen range an explosion occurred.

The defendants contended that they were not the manufacturers of the stove polish and sold it as it was received by them. They will probably appeal the case.

OLD KATAHDIN AS TARGET

New Soft-Nosed Twelve-Inch Shell Fired at Historic Ram

Washington, May 17.—A bit of naval warfare took place on the Potomac river at Indian Head, Va., when the old naval ram Katahdin received her baptism of fire.

It was not the fire of an enemy, but it was aimed at her with every intention of sinking her if possible. Having outlived her usefulness as a fighting vessel, the curious naval vessel was clothed in modern 12-inch, high grade armor plate, and a dozen ordnance experts directed the attack on her with the new soft-nosed naval shell, hurled through a big 12-inch gun.

The Katahdin served to assist the naval experts in ascertaining whether the new shell can be deflected when it strikes at any angle, or whether it would bite into the armor plate, as the naval officers anticipate.

Unfortunately for the public, the navy department conducted the experiment with all possible secrecy. Foreign military and naval attaches were refused permission to witness the test and it is doubtful if accurate information can be had as to the outcome.

NEGLIGENCE IS CHARGED

Legislative Report on Looting of Southbridge Savings Institution

Boston, May 17.—The report of the special legislative committee that has been investigating the Southbridge Savings bank was filed late yesterday afternoon. The committee is unable to locate the funds of the bank because it cannot summon and examine Hall, whose defalcations wrecked the bank, without giving him an "immunity bath." The committee finds negligence in degree in this order:

First, in the savings bank department, for a period of seventeen years. Second, in the auditing committee of the bank. Third, in the trustees of the bank.

The report makes certain recommendations for legislation, the principal of which is to provide for an enforced expert auditing of banks.

THROUGH HARVARD ON DOLLAR A WEEK

Strong Man In College Shows That It Can Be Done

Boston, May 17.—That a man can go through Harvard living on a dollar a week and at the same time be a star student, a variety football player and the third strongest man in college has been proved by E. V. M. Long, a Harvard senior, who for four years has consumed one dollar's worth of food weekly and thrived on it.

"It is easy enough to live on 14 or 15 cents a day," says Long, "when you've worked it out to two things—system and habit. First a man has got to find out the greatest amount of nourishment that a given allowance of money will buy, and so arrange his diet that it will best fit his individual needs. That's the system. Second, he has got to get used to eating those things right along and forget the saw that variety is the spice of life, and that's habit."

TO BECOME NUNS

Three Rich Sisters Reveal Intention of Renouncing the World

Boston, May 17.—Mabel, Mary and Ann Bell, three sisters, who possess a large fortune, living at 14 Egleston street, startled their friends with the announcement of their intention of joining the cloistered order of Visitation nuns.

Their preparations have been carried out with the greatest secrecy, and only when taking leave of their friends yesterday did they reveal their intention of renouncing the world and joining in the educational work of the Sisters of the Visitation.

The three Bell sisters have been inseparable always, but especially so since the death of their parents left them alone with the care of a considerable estate.

FIVE YEARS FOR WALKER

Sentence of President of Bank Which Failed For $1,000,000

Cleveland, May 17.—U. G. Walker, formerly president of the defunct South Cleveland Banking company, was sentenced to five years in the Ohio state penitentiary.

Walker was found guilty of perjury, for making false statements to the state bank examiner. The financial condition of the bank, which failed for more than $1,000,000, was discovered after the failure of an Akron printing concern, which had borrowed heavily from the bank. Walker will appeal to the circuit court.

KERBY OUSTED BY BALLINGER

Axe Falls on Secretary of the Interior's Stenographer

FOR "GOOD OF SERVICE"

In Line With Expressed Intention to "Clean Out Snakes" From Interior Department—Secrecy of Administration Comes In For Criticism—President's Judgment Considered Poor In Selection of Letter Writer

Washington, May 16.—Frederick M. Kerby, the stenographer whose statement on Saturday last brought from President Taft an acknowledgment of the accuracy of the young man's statements, has been discharged by Secretary Ballinger. This action, while inevitable under the circumstances, is generally taken also to be another step in the campaign of elimination in the interior department which Secretary Ballinger has characterized as "snake-killing."

Now that President Taft has narrated the circumstances surrounding his preparation of the letter exonerating Ballinger and virtually admitting the accuracy of the statements made by Kerby, there is a disposition on all sides to dismiss the matter, so far as the president is concerned, with perhaps the suggestion that he might have used a little better judgment.

Had the government officials involved made all the facts known at the beginning of the investigation the incidents would not have been regarded as seriously as they now are. It is not unusual for the president or other government officials to call upon subordinates to prepare letters for their signature. This is exactly what the president did when he was called upon to review the Glavis charges and the fact that he selected for that task a subordinate of the secretary of the interior, instead of some disinterested official, is regarded as unfortunate judgment, rather than indicating desire to have only Ballinger's side of the case.

The text of Ballinger's letter to Kerby is as follows:

"Sir—You are hereby discharged from the public service because you are unworthy to remain in it. In divulging information obtained by you in the confidential relation of stenographer to the secretary of the interior, in communicating that information to those whom you are bound to know are wrongfully seeking to bring reproach upon the administration and to injure me; and in deliberately misstating material facts as to which you treacherously communicate, you show that you are unworthy and unsafe. The fact that your treachery is futile cannot mitigate the character of your offense. For the good of the service you are hereby discharged."

Kerby received the letter of dismissal by special messenger. In discussing the subject of his discharge Kerby said the secretary's action had not been a surprise to him.

"Of course when I issued my statement," he added, "I realized that the secretary would take some such action. As to the charges made by Secretary Ballinger against me I am perfectly willing to leave to the judgment of the people of the country as to whether I acted treacherously or patriotically, and I feel entirely certain that the general verdict will be in my favor. At any rate I think that Secretary Ballinger is not an excellent judge of ethics."

President Taft in person has taken a hand in the situation which has arisen concerning the "inside" history of his letter of Sept. 13, exonerating Secretary Ballinger from the charges of special agent L. R. Glavis and authorizing the dismissal of Glavis. Over his own signature he addressed a long letter to Senator Nelson, chairman of the Ballinger-Phelan investigating committee, setting forth in detail the sequence of events after his receipt at Beverly, on Aug. 18 last, of the charges by Glavis.

He says not only that Lawler did prepare such a letter as Kerby said he did, but that he did so by the president's specific direction. When he received it, he found it was not what he wanted to issue, and he wrote the letter in the form he desired, using from Lawler's draft only one or two general statements.

The president goes still further and takes up the question of the "back dating" of Attorney General Wickersham's summary of the Glavis charges, to which Attorney Louis D. Brandeis has drawn attention. Taft says that the attorney general's letter was in fact "back dated" and that this also was done by his specific direction.

CROWD THOUGHT LION HAD BROKEN LOOSE

Many Persons Injured In Panic Outside Circus Tent

Newark, N. J., May 17.—A mistaken cry of "The lion's loose!" threw a circus crowd of women and children into a frenzy of panic here and in the poll-mill rush seven children were badly crushed and cut, a man fell in a fit, a woman had her shoulder dislocated and many others suffered minor injuries. One little girl had a broken jaw.

The panic was outside the circus tent, during the parade, when the streets were packed with sightseers. Suddenly the band struck up. A mounted policeman's horse took fright and bolted straight for the thick of the crowd. Before he could get it under control, somebody shouted "A lion's loose," and the crowd went mad with fright.

HABEAS CORPUS DENIED

Morse Case Settled So Far as Taking Legal Steps Are Concerned

Washington, May 17.—Charles W. Morse was denied the privilege of filing an application for a writ of habeas corpus by the supreme court of the United States.

New York, May 17.—"That finishes the matter so far as the taking of legal steps is concerned," it was said at the offices of Martin W. Littleton, when information reached there of the supreme court's denial of a writ of habeas corpus for Morse. Beyond saying that no further court proceedings were possible, Littleton's representatives said they did not care to make any statement on the case at this time.

DR. B. C. HYDE

Wife Loyal to Him During His Trouble

SENTENCED TO LIFE IN PRISON

Dr. Hyde Convicted of Murder of Colonel Swope

JURY A LONG TIME OUT

End of Remarkable Case in Which It Was Proved During Trial That Hyde Had Purchased Cyanide Capsules—Brother-in-Law of Convicted Man Also Died During Epidemic of Typhoid Fever in Swope Household

Kansas City, May 17.—After deliberating sixty hours the jury in the trial of Dr. B. Clark Hyde found him guilty of murdering Colonel Thomas H. Swope, the millionaire and philanthropist, with a sentence of life imprisonment.

Thus ended one of the most remarkable murder cases of a decade, in which it was charged that the doctor planned to secure the immense Swope fortune by killing off his wife's entire family with disease germs and subtle poisons.

As the words of conviction were spoken, Mrs. Hyde broke down and hurried to the side of her husband. Her two sisters-in-law, Mrs. E. M. Hopkins, and Miss Laura Hyde, mingled their tears with hers, but the physician stoically and with fixed expression of the mouth said not a word. For a time he was even unable to whisper a word of encouragement to the strong, brave woman who sat at his side.

Dr. Hyde had been under suspicion in connection with the mysterious illness and deaths in the Swope family ever since the death of Colonel Swope on Oct. 3, 1908. The death of Swope followed soon after he had suffered a severe convulsion and this convulsion, it was charged by the members of the Swope family, followed immediately after the administration of a capsule given by direction of Hyde, who said it was a digestive tablet.

It was proved at the trial that Hyde had purchased cyanide of potassium in five-grain capsules. Hyde claimed he bought the cyanide capsules to kill roaches in his office.

Two days before the death of Swope, Moss Hunton, a cousin of the millionaire philanthropist, died at the Swope home following a stroke of apoplexy. Dr. Hyde and Dr. Twyman treated Hunton. The patient was bled profusely, it is charged, at the suggestion of Hyde. Beginning early in December, an epidemic of typhoid fever broke out in the Swope household, during which ten members of the family were stricken and one, Chrisman Swope, a brother of Hyde's wife, died after taking a capsule given at Hyde's direction and after suffering a convulsion similar to the one that attacked Colonel Swope.

Margaret Swope, Chrisman's sister, who was also treated by Hyde, had a convulsion after taking a capsule, but she was given an emetic at once by Twyman and recovered. In all, Hyde was indicted on eleven counts, the remaining indictments charging him with trying to murder members of the Swope family by introducing typhoid germs and poison into the medicine administered by him.

Dr. Hyde is the husband of Colonel Swope's niece, formerly Miss Frances Swope. Hyde married Miss Swope, in spite of the opposition of the girl's mother, Mrs. Logan Swope. The mother and the son-in-law became reconciled.

HISTORICAL COMET WEEK

Celestial Wanderer Rapidly Making Nearest Approach to Earth

Cambridge, Mass., May 17.—Halley's comet will occupy the centre of the stage for the next few days. It is now almost at its nearest point to the earth, and its movements will excite world-wide interest for the remainder of the week.

Tomorrow astronomers in the far east will be afforded an opportunity to witness a remarkable phenomenon—the transit of a comet across the sun. The transit will not be visible in America, but the intense brightness of the celestial wanderer has given the Cambridge astronomers reason to hope that observations at noonday, just before and after it crosses the sun's disc, will be possible.

The comet is now almost at its nearest point to the earth, and tomorrow our planet will be rushing through its tail. Strangely shaped clouds and abundant showers of meteorites may be looked for to accompany the flight of the earth through the tail of the comet, but there will be no more serious results.

BRISSETTE IS CAPTURED

Federal Officers Have Been After Alleged Smuggler For Three Years

Houlton, Me., May 17.—After patiently waiting three years, and watching all night several times for Louis Brissette, who was wanted for the alleged smuggling of liquor and sale of the same without paying a federal tax, the federal officers were successful in capturing their man without a struggle.

On July 3, 1907, a "line score," kept by Brissette on the boundary line between Maine and New Brunswick near Limestone, was raided by the United States officials and torn down as a nuisance.

Brissette escaped to the Canadian side and since has been running a small hotel just across the border and a sawmill on the American side.

Learning that he was near the sawmill Deputy Marshall Stevens and Deputy Customs Collector Thayer laid in wait for him and caught him unaware. He was taken to Portland for arraignment.

COLEMAN IN NOW IN NEW DIFFICULTIES

Former Bank Man Is Charged With Larceny of Jewelry

Boston, May 17.—Charged with the larceny of $350 worth of jewelry, George W. Coleman, whose trial for wrecking by embezzlement the National City bank of Cambridge comes up in the federal courts today, was arrested at his home in Cambridge yesterday.

He was brought to this city and taken into the municipal court and arraigned before Judge Murray. He waived examination and in the sum of $500 was held for the June sitting of the grand jury. The bail was furnished by his father.

The charge against Coleman is the larceny of jewelry to be amount of $350 from the Frank A. Andrews company, Inc., of this city. The date of the offense is given as Oct. 15, 1909.

CALIFORNIA SHAKEN

Earthquake Shocks Alarm People, but Little Damage Is Reported

Los Angeles, Cal., May 17.—This city and surrounding territory was visited by a series of earthquake shocks that alarmed many people, but did little damage beyond breaking dishes, destroying house ornaments and cracking walls of the lighter houses.

The shocks were felt in Pasadena, Riverside, Redlands and San Bernardino. Pasadena suffered the heaviest damage. Walls of buildings were cracked, and on Mt. Wilson, where the Carnegie observatory is situated, the tremors alarmed many tourists who had climbed the peak to view the comet.

New York Doctor Expects to Do His Usual Work Meanwhile

New York, May 17.—Dr. Gustave A. Gayer, a doctor of philosophy, ate his breakfast as usual yesterday, and then announced that it would be his last meal for three and possibly four weeks. He weighs 235 pounds.

Dr. Gayer is to be examined every day by physicians. If they tell him he is becoming dangerously weakened he will break his fast. Otherwise he expects to fulfill the time he has allotted himself, taking his usual amount of exercise and doing his usual work.

THE WONDER IN THE SKY

Tuesday morning, May 17, 1910, will long be remembered by those fortunate people who happened to be awake at two o'clock or shortly after and saw that band of white light, stretching diagonally upward from the Eastern horizon toward the southern sky.

The spectators lost all fear that the most famous comet in history had been shorn of its glory. It was an hour before the head of the comet would rise in the eastern sky, which was cloudless and almost hazeless to the edge, yet the tail covered a space equalling nearly one-sixth of the entire horizon. The tail soon began to fade in the approaching dawn and was nearly vanished when the head came into sight.

No one need wonder that the savage peoples, not knowing whence it came nor whether it is going, living in an age when superstition furnishes the only explanations for the mysterious, should regard this as a sign from God. Twice at least in the history of this comet has it been called the flaming sword of some great maker of war, for it is the same terrifying sight that was present at the destruction of Jerusalem under a Roman Caesar and at the conquering of England by Norman William. It has been regarded as other sorts of signals of terror, and at this visitation the savages of South Africa are led to believe it is a fiery chariot sent to take the soul of King Edward.

If Thursday and Friday and Saturday and Sunday evenings are pleasant we shall see more of this and perhaps get an even better view.

It will certainly afford those of this generation a story worth telling to their children and their grand children, and we may well be gratified on our accounts at the opportunity of witnessing this wondrous sight.

BIRDS EYE VIEWS

Judging from the money expended, New Jersey should be a paradise of good roads, or at least steadily approaching that blissful condition. The report of the state road commissioner shows that the state has paid toward their construction and maintenance since 1892, $2,859,735, this being only one-third of the cost of the stone road building. The roads built measure 477 miles. The remaining two-thirds of the cost is paid by the counties, and the average outlay has been $6,802 per mile of road. On the whole the state roads have cost about $10,000,000, and have proved so satisfactory that it is proposed to continue the present system indefinitely. New Jersey has learned from experience that good roads are a paying investment.

Phillips Exeter academy boys ought to look out now. By their spectacular victory at the Yale fitting school athletic meet, they must have aroused all the envy of all the other fitting schools.

Representatives of the American and Chilean governments in London having charge of the celebrated Alsop claim, which was shortly to have been presented to King Edward for arbitration, have been informed by the United States government and that of Chile that King George V will undertake the arbitration of this claim and that the matter will be presented to him about Aug. 1. The most of us can remember when the United States would have protested against any Englishman in such a position.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES

The "Summer Season"

The suggestion that by a proper pooling of interests in the matter of advertising the summer hotel business of the old Granite state would be increased by many fold is worthy of more than passing attention. It is easily seen that if the pleasures of spring and early autumn are fully and rightly exploited the "summer season" may be lengthened to almost twice its present period.

Much legislation has been passed in New Hampshire directly favoring the "summer business," which, from a somewhat meager beginning less than half a century ago, has come to mean a vast source of profit for many different classes of "year round" citizens of the state.

The advent of the summer sojourner in New Hampshire has given an impetus to all branches of business. Of itself, it has flourished like a green bay tree in the past and the business acumen of the men who are at the head of the large hotels is such that future progress is assured without a doubt.—Nashua Telegraph.

PEOPLES' OPINIONS

Dusty Daniel Street

Editor Herald:

When it is considered that Daniel street is a thoroughfare traveled by more strangers to Portsmouth than any other street of the city, the Board of Public Works or the street sprinkling management should show some effort to keep the dust down in that portion of the city. The conditions that exist there are something that does not bring much pride to any city.

The city fathers and other city officials will get a dose of this dry mud when they move down on that street, and somebody will wake up.

WATER.

Mark Twain's tribute to the character of James Lampton, the original of his famous Colonel Mulberry Sellers, lacks nothing essential for an epitaph on his own tombstone. It is as follows: "A pathetic and beautiful spirit, a manly man, a straight and honorable man; a man with a big, foolish, unselfish heart in his bosom; a man born to be loved, and he was loved by all his friends, and by his family worshiped."

If Old Prob. would simply say, "Weather likely to be what it is likely to be," he would get fewer knocks and the world would get the same weather.

By retiring from politics English lords can find more time to negotiate satisfactory alliances with wealthy families abroad.

Very polite that doctor who fits prescription to condition as follows: "Work hard and eat no meat."

It is simply significant that hundreds of automobile men are qualifying as "first-aid" experts.

Like Dr. Cook, Halley's comet is found more often where it isn't than where it is.

Generally debilitated for years. Had sick headaches, lacked ambition, was worn out and all run down. Burdock Blood Bitters made me a well woman.

Queen Mary, First Lady of Great Britain

English mothers are ready to receive their new queen with open arms. Queen Mary won her way into the hearts of the mothers of England when she was the Princess of Wales by her talks and defense of mothers. She has certain theories on raising children that she has expressed in public on many occasions, one of the principal ones being that her children must obey; that they must come in contact with other children and not grow to manhood and womanhood without knowing the world outside of court circles.

WHOLE CLASS OF MIDSHIPMEN FLUNKED

New York, May 17.—The Times prints the following:

The navy department has recently passed on the examination papers of the class which was graduated from the naval academy in June, 1908. Members of this class in the service now have the rank of passed midshipmen, and the recent examination was to determine their fitness for promotion to the grade of ensign. Not a single member of the class passed the examination in navigation. The highest mark made was 1.86, whereas the passing mark is 2.50.

There are several midshipmen of this class on duty on ships now at the Brooklyn navy yard, and the result of the test has come as a shock to them, although it was not entirely unexpected. Unless a reexamination in this study is allowed the mark on navigation with marks on other subjects will rank 1908, for the latter class will not be permitted to take another examination for promotion until a year has passed.

"I have never seen such an examination in my life," said one of the midshipmen yesterday. "There was not a man in the class who could possibly have passed it. There is a report, however, that in view of the character of the examination the navy department has decided to raise the marks of all except the 20 men who stood lowest to or above a 2.50."

One midshipman after reading over the examination, signed his paper in blank and handed it in. For doing this he will in all probability be court-martialed. A recommendation to this effect, it is said, has been forwarded to the department.

This is the first time that an entire graduate class from the naval academy has been "flunked" on a subject.

Heretofore examinations for promotion have been considered more or less matters of form, the object being to find out whether officers were keeping abreast of their work and capable of efficient performance of their duty. The midshipmen are particularly bitter over the nature of the questions asked. They say that the majority of them were on matters concerning navigation which the practical navigator would never need to know in the performance of his duty.

The examinations were held on the various ships to which the midshipmen had been ordered, whether in the Philippines, on the Pacific coast or in home waters, and it is said that the navigating officers of several of these freely admitted that they themselves would have been unable to pass them. Unless some action is taken by the navy department the result of the examination will be felt by members of the class throughout their careers in the service. It will mean, as the midshipmen interpret it, a material loss of numbers, and this in turn, under the present system of promotion, means that as they advance in the service their promotion may be materially retarded.

In the lower grades of ensign, junior lieutenant and lieutenant, the effect will not be materially noticeable, but when '08 men approach the higher grades of lieutenant commander, commander and captain the difference of a few numbers counts heavily. There have been instances of a difference of 5 to 10 numbers meaning the loss of the next higher rank.

Navy men are inclined to believe, however, that the department will interfere in some way.

TO LIGHT COAST TOWNS

The York Electric Light company has been sold by Hon. Edward S. Marshall of York Harbor, to a company known as the York Electric Light and Power company of Biddeford, for $60,000. The sale took place on Saturday and the new company, it is understood, are seeking to control all of the electric lighting between Dover and Biddeford. They will light all of the short towns including York Harbor, for which they now assume the contract held by Mr. Marshall, York Beach, Wells, Ogunquit and Kennebunk.

Hon. Edward S. Marshall some years ago offered to sell to the town of York, the electric light plant for a figure about half of what was paid by the new company, but after a great deal of controversy the offer was rejected, the statement being made that Mr. Marshall was seeking to unload the property on the town. After that Mr. Marshall refused to part with the plant until he sold at the present time.

ONE MOMENT PLEASE!

Electric Sign advertising is no longer an experiment. The most successful firms of world-wide reputation as well as the stores with whom we have done business give us facts that prove the advertising worth of Electric Signs to be far in excess of any method of advertising that has ever been devised for the amount expended.

Look for the most enterprising city of today and you will find one that uses Electric Signs on all available locations and where merchants appreciate the advertising value and use light. I am making and selling the best signs that can be produced, not the cheapest, but signs that will stand up and give service for years. Recent inventions have reduced the cost and also the cost of maintaining. Public spirit and civic pride demand well lighted business sections in our cities. Why not do your part with a well lighted, artistic Electric Sign and increase your business as well.

I charge nothing for estimates or sketches and am always willing to explain details and serve your interests. Respectfully yours, come sufficiently bright to be seen at noon today, or on Wednesday, either before or after the sun, is yet a matter of conjecture.

If the moon were not to quite so bright on Wednesday evening, there might be a chance to see the end of the comet's tail as it scurried down behind the western horizon after the sun. It will certainly be an object of interest on Thursday evening while Friday night Halley's comet should be one of the finest celestial spectacles in the last quarter of a century, rivaling the great comet of 1882.

When seen Sunday morning the comet was somewhat brighter than the first magnitude, and Prof. O. C. Wendell was able to follow the comet with the telescope to within a quarter of an hour of the sunrise.

It is this brightness which gives the hope of a Sunday observation just before and just after the transit across the sun's disk Wednesday.

The transit will be visible to observers equipped with dark glass in Japan, Australia and India, or practically throughout the region from longitude 120 west to longitude 90 east.

On Wednesday the earth will pass through the comet's tail, but as that appendage is believed to be composed of something far thinner than the nearest approach to a vacuum on this earth the Harvard astronomers do not look for any ill effect.

Its Shape a Crescent.

Geneva, N. Y., May 17.—Excellent observations of Halley's comet were taken on Monday by Prof. William Brooks, director of Smith observatory who reported the comet's tail stretching out in a broad band across 45 degrees. The nucleus, Prof. Brooks said, was very bright, being easily visible with the naked eye long after all the stars, except Venus, had disappeared.

Dr. Brooks said that the comet, viewed through the telescope, showed the same remarkable changes in form that were noted three days ago. Its shape that morning was that of a pointed crescent, with the nucleus on the extreme front and much larger than noted at any previous observation.

Eliot, Me., May 17.

The boys who have been trapping for muskrats report a very poor season. Raymond York claims better luck than any of the others and he only got two muskrats from traps set on the shore of Spinney's Creek.

Mrs. Elyra Ames, who helped care for her aunt, Mrs. John C. McKenney, during her last sickness, and has since been staying at Elmer H. McKenney's, returned to her home in Lewiston today.

The Atlantic Shore Line railway is fixing up the guard rail along the river bank near the Advent church in South Eliot.

The ladies circle of the Advent Christian church will meet with Mrs. J. W. Davis on Thursday afternoon.

The Glee club of East Eliot entertained the Industrial club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Eardard Saturday evening, May 14. The following program was given:

After the program a box supper was given by the Industrial club, from which they realized a snug sum for their club house which they hope to build soon.

At a late hour all left for their homes, thanking the Glee club for the pleasant evening which they had enjoyed.

Meeting of Eliot Centennial Committee

The town's central committee for the centennial of the town met at the William Fogg library on Monday evening, and settled considerable in the way of details.

Dr. John L. M. Willis reported for the history committee that ex-Governor John F. Hill has accepted several of the proposals for markers of historic spots and agreed to provide bronze tablets for the purpose and that Mr. Hill suggests granite markers for some other spots. The report was accepted with the understanding that the committee proceed further with the work of determining places that ought to be marked at least temporarily.

A committee was voted to procure samples and styles for ribbon badges and buttons, and report at the next meeting. Chairman Willis appointed F. A. Staples, Charles P. Drake and Alfred Spinney.

It was announced that a large number of the boys in town want some boys' sports and the suggestion was agreeably received. A partial list of a suitable committee had been prepared by some of the boys. It was decided to accept the proposition and to wait till the next meeting to see about the formal appointment of the boys' committee. It is desired to have every section of the town well represented in this.

Committees on parade and athletics and several others were talked over, and their membership partially determined.

The announcement was made that the Larler camps propose having a pageant again this year, and that it is possible to arrange for it at centennial time though that might necessitate some extra labor and expense.

Announcement was made that a large number of the former residents have signified their intention of returning at the centennial time.

The committee on parade is not fully determined, but despite that remarkable progress has been made. It is certain that a large number of historic and representative floats can be secured for the occasion.

The next meeting was voted for Thursday evening, May 26.

Vice presidents and committees not previously published are:

Vice presidents—Martin R. Allen, Nelson H. Barnard, George E. Bartlett, James W. Bartlett, Leon Brooks, Leander Brooks, George W. Brown, Samuel Carter, Mark W. Chick, Chas. H. Cole, John R. PUBLIC SCHOOLS TO CLOSE

The public schools are closed this afternoon out of respect to Miss Florence A. Ham the principal of the Training schools, whose funeral was held this afternoon at one o'clock.

At the Farragut and the Franklin schools, there was a brief service, at nine o'clock, for the late principal of these two schools, and the schools were then closed for the remainder of the day.

The services were at one o'clock and some handsome floral tributes were sent by the teachers of the city.

TO HEAR REPORT OF COMMITTEE that most of the sub-committees will report at that time.

A meeting of the general committee of the Old Home Week, will be held at 7.30 this evening and it is expected The Herald is read by more people than any other local paper.

HOW HER FORTUNE CAME.
Also Her Husband, Who Proved an Important Element.
By ANNA BENTLEY.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]
May 10.
We have all received a dreadful shock. When uncle's valet went to his master's room this morning he found uncle on the floor dead. Poor, dear old man, to die all alone, without any wife or child to soothe his going! If he had only let me live with him I might at least have been within call at the moment when he was stricken. But, no; though I offered repeatedly to be a daughter to him, he steadily refused, persisting in living alone with no one but servants in the house. But uncle was very eccentric.

I supposed there was no doubt that uncle died of some heart trouble or apoplexy, or something like that, but they say now that the doctors declare there are no evidences whatever of disease. It was a treatise on poison. I can't wait to see the morning paper, and yet I dread to look at it for fear it will contain some terrible development. Great heavens! "Arnold Maxwell" came to his death through his insidious poison! Who could have had an interest in murdering him? No one but me. I shall be charged with the crime. In any event, I shall be suspected. Oh, how many horrors accompany wealth! Every one is talking about uncle's taking off. The papers are full of it. The police, they say, have been very active, but do not claim as yet to have got any clue. One account says that both servants—there are but two—have been under close surveillance ever since that dreadful night, though they have both proved that they were at a servant's ball from 10 o'clock till 3 in the morning, while the doctors say uncle died between 11 and 1. I wonder how they know that. Oh, how I wish they would find the poisoner!

This morning I saw the first newspaper mention of myself in connection with uncle's death: "No will has yet been found, but it is understood that Miss Clementine Deane, a daughter of the deceased's late wife, has long been the heir apparent. But Miss Deane, not being a blood relative of the murdered man, cannot inherit under the common law." What a relief! I cannot inherit unless by a will. And yet what a singular position in which to be placed! If a will is found making me an heir, I shall doubtless have to answer to a charge of murdering the man who loved me well enough to leave me his property. God grant that no will may be found, or, if one is found, may some one other than I be the beneficiary! I would rather work and starve than go through the ordeal of being mistaken for a murderer. Think of the long wait in jail for a trial, my portrait everywhere staring me in the face, gaped at in a crowded courtroom. My God, I shall go mad! For a week I have been dreading an arrest. I fancy every one with whom I come in contact is a detective watching me. I am getting thin and have lost all my color. I must divert my mind and look less worried or it will be assumed that my crime is preying upon me. I will try to read. Perhaps a sensational novel would draw my thoughts from this frightful sensation of my own. I have been to the library and brought home a book. How kind that library was to me! I wonder if he knew that I was dreading a terrible misfortune. When he was telling me about the singular things he finds between the leaves of books returned to the library I forgot my trouble. He says he finds everything from a love letter to a hairpin. How careless we women are! Men seldom leave things between the pages of books, but men don't read as many books as women. May 21.

The will has been found. I am heir to a great fortune. I have been congratulated. I hinted to one of my congratulators that I shall be suspected of having poisoned uncle. He replied that I would at least have "millions for defense." But that would not remove the charge, the trial and the stain to follow. The same person had me not worry. He says that detectives have been watching my every act since the crime was committed and they have admitted to not getting a single item of evidence against me. I knew it. That woman who insisted on coming in to make a dress for me for a song was one of them. That man I saw at so many places, in the shops, on the street, everywhere, was another. I am not reassured by the person who has comforted me, but I have finished my book and will go for another. I long to talk to my friend the librarian about what is on my mind. He has been my only confidant.

I am electrified by a spark of hope. This morning I received a letter addressed in a strange hand. I studied the superscription a long while, but I could not make out from whom it could be. It was postmarked as sent from this town. Finally it occurred to me to open it. I suppose I would have done so before had my mind not been so tortured by the frightful specter that has been hanging over me. What was my surprise to see at the bottom of the letter, "Your friend The Librarian."

This is what he says:
After talking with you yesterday I went home and, taking up a newspaper, read the detail report of the doctors who were deputed to analyze the poison found in the case of your late uncle. Suddenly my fingers released their grip on the paper, and it fell to the floor. An idea had flashed upon me. What a singular facility to memory, and how marvellously it is awakened! I remembered a wet, dismal night a month ago when I was sitting at my desk in the library. A young man, a stranger to me, came in and asked for a rare work of a foreign author. Since it had never been recalled before I should not have remembered it except for its rarity. I went to the shelf, where I found it covered with dust, took it down and gave it to the stranger.

It was a treatise on poisons. A group of events recorded in my brain had led me to this remembrance. My chat with you as to your uncle's death, all I have heard about it and lastly this report of the doctors—might not that book contain mention of the poison reported by them as having been used to kill your uncle, and might not he in some way connect this stranger with the murder?

I hurried to the library, found the book, which had been returned, and opened it. You remember that the first day you came here I told you how many articles are left carelessly between the leaves of returned books. Well, the book I opened contained an instance of this kind. On running over the leaves looking for mention of the poison named by the doctors I found lying between two pages devoted to the description of it and the effects a small piece of paper. On it was a note written in a peculiar hand referring to the chapter and page on which this poison that killed your uncle was described. But one thing more remained for me to do to establish my find as a bit of evidence. I referred to the report of the book's withdrawal and found the name of the person who had withdrawn it, or at least the name he had given. I also found that the book had not been taken out since he had taken it.

The volume, the bit of paper—evidently slipped in between the pages for a place mark and forgotten—and the record concerning its withdrawal are now all in the hands of the police. I write this to you before going to bed that with the morning light you may have a hint of being relieved of that unspoken suspicion that you cannot but feel overshadows you.

Isn't it delightful? If it really turns out that this man who seems to have been so interested in this especial poison killed uncle I shall be vindicated and rich.

But it may turn out that he wished the poison for another purpose. They may never find him. If not, at any rate this bit of evidence proves his existence and diverts suspicion from me.

June 20.
The young man who took the book on poisons from the library has been arrested. The police have been a long while about it and would not have succeeded in finding him had it not been for the handwriting on his slip used for a bookmark. The way it came about was this: Uncle has a nephew, a real nephew, his own sister's son. I have never before heard of him. He is a physician. He put in a claim as next of kin for uncle's estate. As soon as the police heard of this they secured a specimen of his handwriting. It turned out to be the same queer hand as that found in the book.

Sept. 18.
The second part of the horror attending uncle's death is ended, thank heavens. Yesterday the murderer received his punishment. I did not know it till it was all over. It is all so dreadful! I don't wish another fortune to come to me in such an awful way.

It is my wedding day. And whom am I to marry? Why, the man who removed the cloud that hung over me at the time of uncle's death. Isn't it natural that I should appreciate such an act even if it came unintended? But he sympathized with me from the first. And when he made the discovery that vindicated me he could scarcely contain himself for joy.

And so ends the episode of the coming of my fortune. We are to go abroad, my husband having received a commission to examine libraries there and purchase a new lot of books for the library here. There has been a gift for this purpose. Who knows who is the giver? I do.

BLANK CARTRIDGE.
A Southern Revolutionist Who Fell Into His Own Trap.
By OSCAR COX.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]
A friend of mine who had been United States consul in Central America told me this story one evening while we were smoking on the deck of a steamer on our way from the isthmus to New Orleans:
You've heard of the Mancha family, I suppose, who did a bigger business at revolutionizing than any lot of men who ever put out the sign "Revolution" in Central America. Well, Juan Mancha, the oldest brother, was head of the firm and was the keenest, the foxiest rascal of the lot. His eye was always on the loot, but he had the faculty of playing patriot with more emotional accomplishments than any revolutionizer in Central America. I was consul at Costa Rica when Juan Mancha engineered the revolution of 18— and knew all about the story of Diaz Valdez, the secretary of state, who finally went over to him with a satchel containing half a million dollars.

Mancha had got most of the people on his side and had stolen enough money to send to New Orleans for a cargo of arms and ammunition. He would have appropriated this fund to himself, but it wasn't enough. He was not a small dealer in revolutions, but a big one, usually aiming for something like a million or two. But he was in need of more funds when Valdez, thinking that he was sure to win, concluded to go over to him.

Senora Valdez was a mighty pretty and a mighty bright woman. She had been a great coquette before Valdez married her and hadn't outgrown the habit, though you'll see from what I'm going to tell you that she was true to her husband. Well, Valdez told his wife one day that Mancha was sure to win in the end and that they'd better arrange to go over. He suggested that she go to Mancha and tell him that her husband was ready to join him with

"TAKE HIM OUT AND SHOOT HIM."
$500,000. But Valdez didn't wish to be considered a deserter from the existing government. To avoid this obliquely he would be on a certain day at a certain village midway between the government and the insurgent forces, and Mancha could send out a dozen or so mounted men and capture him. Senora Valdez was to secure Mancha's promise to permit the secretary and herself to take passage for the United States with $300,000 of the $500,000, the remaining $200,000 to go to the "cause of the revolution."

This was a very nice and looked like a very safe scheme to the secretary, but his wife, who was brighter than he, couldn't see why Mancha should be content with $200,000 when he could as well have the whole sum. However, she volunteered to go and make the deal. So, giving out that she was ill and shut up in her home, she went under cover of the night to Mancha's lines and in the morning, raising a white handkerchief on a stick in sight of the revolutionary redcoats, was taken in and conducted to Mancha.

Now, Senora Valdez did not propose to have her husband give himself up until she had swept those handsome but keen eyes of hers about her and learned something of the situation. The revolutionary army at that particular point consisted of between 100 and 200 men, and with a view to insuring her husband's safety she made up her mind to capture it. I don't mean that she, a woman, would take so many men prisoners, but she would win them to do her bidding in case of need. She didn't work openly before Mancha's very eyes, but secretly and principally among the officers, especially the commander in chief, a half-breed Spaniard and Astor not twenty years old, whom she proceeded to tie up in a bowknot.

When she had made due preparation she sent a messenger, or, rather, Mancha did, telling Valdez to be at the appointed place the next night. At the time agreed upon Valdez was there, quietly sleeping, so it was supposed, at which a troop of revolutionary soldiers swooped down on the place and carried him off. He reached the headquarters of the insurgents the next day and was conducted between two soldiers to Mancha.

"Take him out and shoot him," said the revolutionary chief.

"Before I die," said Valdez, "may I have a word with you?"

Mancha took him into a private room, where he unbuttoned his coat and embraced him.

"Senora Valdez has assured me," said Mancha, "that you are especially anxious not to be known as deserting the government cause. Now, it has occurred to me that in order to preserve your good name it would be well to have you shot."

"What do you mean?" asked Valdez, blanching.

"I mean that if I place you before a firing squad whose guns are loaded with blank cartridges, they fire at you, you drop and are carried away, the news will go to the capital that you died a noble death. Meanwhile you and your senora can step on a steamer and remain dead in New York, Paris—wherever you find the climate most to your taste."

"Very well. I presume I shall have to remain under guard till I am executed. When will that occur?"

"At once."

"I suppose I may bid goodby to my wife?"

"Certainly."

Senora Valdez was called in and the matter explained to her. She thought a moment and said:

"Your plan is admirable, but you are making one mistake. The execution must not take place till just before a steamer leaves."

"Very well," said Mancha. "A steamer leaves tomorrow evening for New York. I shall appoint your execution to take place at 7 p. m. You will wait at 5."

Senora Valdez went at once to Gonzalez, the commander of the army, and told him that her husband was to be shot at 7, but no order would be issued to leave out the bullets. Gonzalez looked knowing, and the senora secured his promise to inform her if she were correct in her surmises. She further plotted with him for his support in case Mancha should not give an order to use blank cartridges. If Gonzalez would obey her order to get rid of Mancha and lead his men, with the secretary of state, to the capital to join the government forces the half million that Mancha had with him would be divided between him and his army, he having a hundred thousand for his share. To this, after some hesitation, he also agreed.

The next afternoon the secretary was marched out for execution. His weeping wife was there to see. Gonzalez was there, too, and whispered to her that his men's guns were loaded by order of Mancha. She then openly requested him to send for the commander. Mancha appeared, wondering if there could be a hitch in his plan.

"I believe, general," said Senora Valdez, "that there is treachery. My husband will be fired at with bullets instead of blank cartridges."

Mancha did not know what to do or to say.

"Colonel Gonzalez," continued the lady, "I have General Mancha's promise that my husband shall be fired at with blank cartridges. You are an honorable man. Make a test of your guns by firing them at General Mancha. If he has fulfilled his promise he will not be injured."

Gonzalez, who was prepared for this, took a gun from one of his men, aimed it at Mancha, fired and shot him dead.

The act was the signal for a counter revolution, if it could be called such, where there were but some hundred and forty rascals led by a greater rascal than any of them. Of course Gonzalez feigned astonishment that the piece he had fired at his chief had been loaded. Senora Valdez rushed to her husband and embraced him. Then, turning, she addressed the garrison, nearly all of whom had turned out, to witness the execution.

"Soldiers," she said, "my husband and myself came here to make an offer by which you should all profit. That man, pointing to Mancha's body, 'promised for the sake of appearances to pretend to execute my husband. You see that the traitor has been killed by one of the bullets intended for the man he would slay.'

Then Gonzalez told them that there was a treasure to be divided among them; that they were to march to the capital and have preferment among the government forces, which now that the treacherous Mancha was dead would surely be triumphant.

The first thing done was to bring out the treasure and turn it over to this valiant army, whose conscience was altogether too tender to see a man stood up to be shot down by bullets when he had been promised blank cartridges. There was a fine spree that night, and the next morning the army, with Senor and Senora Valdez riding in its front, marched to the capital. They received an ovation, for it was certain that the killing of Mancha and the defection of this sum of thought relatively important portion of his army would end the revolution.

Senor Valdez gave out that the plot had been carried out exactly as it had been conceived. Of course there was a shortage of half a million in the accounts, but the people didn't mind a little thing like that since it had accomplished such a brilliant result. The outstanding revolutionary armies soon laid down their arms, and peace once more reigned in the state.

Senora Valdez came in for the credit of executing the scheme, though her husband was supposed to have conceived it. At any rate, she was the most popular woman at the capital, and when the president's term expired Valdez was elected in his place.

WOMAN AND FASHION
For Commencement Day.
The ideas introduced in dresses for groupings are nowadays usually repeated in children's frocks in modified form. The sleeve in one piece with the bodice is extensively used in children's garments and is pretty and new. Little frills about the neck and sleeves are also a dainty finish and are copies of gowns intended for older people. The Russian closing is quite a favorite and is especially attractive when the little frock is trimmed with bright braid or decorative buttons.

A great amount of hand work may be lavished on summer linens and ginghams in the way of embroidery, smocking or braiding, the two latter being most used, as they are easy of execution and most effective when completed. Low square or round necks and short sleeves promise to be as popular as ever this summer in children's garments, and this makes gimpes as necessary as ever. Those in eyelet embroidery in all over design are very handsome and may be quite inexpensive if made up at home. It is surprising what pretty gimpes and undersleeves may be had if a few yards of lace or insertion are purchased and used with taste. Checks are always appropriate for little girls, and those being shown have touches of green, red or blue in combination with brass buttons.

For dressy summer frocks fine batiste, lawn or swiss is, as usual, first choice, as they may be as simple as one desires or elaborated with lace or embroideries.

The design shown in the sketch is unusually pretty for the growing girl who wishes a dress for some special occasion at school and is an imported model. The arrangement of the lace collar caught with dainty bows is very smart, and the fine lace under gimpes and sleeves is in pretty contrast with the heavier lace of the collar. The trimming about the skirt is also new and pretty and is of the same lace as the collar.

Trimmings For Summer Hats.
Among the flowers used for trimmings roses are first favorites, roses of all sizes and of all colorings, nature's color limitations being altogether disregarded. The rose of mouseline is a decided fad and is wonderfully soft and fluffy. It is offered in all the wonderful new shadings. One of the most attractive of the mouseline rose trimmed hat models seen this season was of the large picture hat variety. The straw was of a one lace character, and around the crown were massed clusters of pink and white mouseline roses.

Rococo effects in tiny rose clusters are liked by the designers, especially in connection with the big draped crown and narrow brim. But the loveliest rose hats are the large picturesque shady shapes in white or straw color laden with roses in natural tones or in colorings emphasizing but slightly nature's color schemes.

Ten roses are popular and shade from creamy yellow to creamy pink. Wonderfully natural clusters of La France roses, the audacious sunrise rose with its glowing yellow and red, all the pink and yellow roses and pure white roses of all sizes are on the modish list.

The Smartest Jabots.
Crape, black and white net, organdie in black and white and dull unglazed silk cut on the bias are used for the fashioning of smart jabots, stocks and tiffs for mourning wear. Organdie is still worn for collars and cuffs which are simply folded, not hemmed, if intended to be thrown away when no longer clean. Sometimes collars and cuffs are made of net with crape hems, and a stock and jabot crape is often worn when no further touch of crape is desired.

Fancy Net Turbans.
The hot, red turban has given way to a large one made of coarse fancy net. The same kind is used that we have had for gown drapery during the winter. Brilliant colors are seen, such as purple, the new vibrant dark blue, black, white with a black spot and black and red.

The turbans are an artistic mass of this net twisted into puffs and loops and ends. The latter are wired in order to keep their shape and give the turban character.

LITERARY NOTES
June 10 Story Book.
The June issue of the 10 Story Book just out contains a number of unusually interesting and clever stories, besides the catchy cover design, the timely Editorial, Thinkers, the Short Story Masterpiece, this month "False Alarm" by Guy de Maupassant, the Old Favorite Poem "Famine Song" by Laurence Hope, and the Reading and Rot department by John Stapleton Crowley-Brown. "A Masterpiece Painted With a Broom" by W. Stockard leads the magazine and has to do with artists and artist models and their consequent entanglements.

In June Popular Mechanics.
In the June number of Popular Mechanics Magazine the plans and details for constructing M. Santos-Dumont's successful monoplane, the "Demoiselle," are given to the world. Santos-Dumont is one of the pioneers in aerial experimentation, and successful aviators everywhere acknowledge their indebtedness to him. In the interests of the development of aeronautics, he decided to give amateurs and experts alike the benefit of his work.

What a Pogrom Is.
Pogrom—a word used often by Mr. George Kennan in his articles on "The Reaction in Russia," the first of which is the leading feature of the June "Century"—is defined in the new supplement of the "Century Dictionary" as: "In Russia, an organized massacre, particularly a massacre of Jews that is countenanced more or less openly by the officials." Mr. Kennan himself, in his article in the June "Century," defines it as "that distinctively Russian combination of assault, robbery, arson, pillage and murder."

A Cohan & Harris Song Free.
"May Moon" is the name of the big song hit of the Cohan & Harris minstrel, presenting George Evans and his "Honey Boys" during their recent run in New York. The words are by Earl J. Vanderveer and the music by Billy J. Vanderveer, two well known song writers. By special arrangement the words and music of this pretty love song will be given next Sunday with the New York World.

NOVELTY ACT AT MUSIC HALL
Patean, a Ventriloquist, Makes a Big Hit.
The show that opened at Music Hall Monday, for the first three days, is headed by Patean, a ventriloquist, who, aided by his company of dummies, Capt. Blooom, Jim and Sammy, the coon, manages to keep the audience in one continuous laughter from start to finish with their witty sayings. This is a very good act for the children to see.

The DeBonds, singing and talking sketch, were very good, and was well appreciated.

The picture program was very good, including a variety of subjects which were appreciated by all present.

ROAD COMPLETED
Section of State Boulevard at Rye Beach.
The section of the ocean boulevard between the Farragut hotel and the bathing pavilion has been completed and now there is a continuous road from Odiorne's Point to Hampton Beach, along the coast.

Ballou, machinist, 56 Pleasant street, Portsmouth, N. H., says: "I think as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills today as when I first used them. For sometime my kidneys were out of order and caused my back to become very lame and painful. I finally got so bad that I could not attend to my work as any sudden movement sent sharp twinges through my body. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Philbrick's Drug Store, came to my relief and I have had practically no trouble from my kidneys since. Whenever I hear anyone complaining of backache, I advise him to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I know of several persons who have noted my suggestion and have been benefited."

USEFUL HOME GARDENS.

Method of Laying One Out and Cultivating It.

Many people residing in rural communities are anxious to get information whereby they can make the space about their homes useful for garden purposes.

The one great secret in being successful with the family garden is to provide an abundance of plant food in a form readily available to the growing plants. Stable and barnyard manure are the best fertilizers at all times. Some of the commercial plant foods are excellent in their place, especially when it is desired to force some of the early varieties of vegetables, but their use requires that the soil be in a high state of fertility and that the gardener have an expert knowledge of their uses and functions.

Constant cultivation should be the rule for this will keep the soil in an ideal physical condition for the roots to grow in, besides keeping the weeds in check. Cultivate early and persistently and keep ahead of the weeds. Allowing the weed seeds to germinate and then quickly destroying them by frequent cultivation early in the growing season will save a large amount of work during the summer.

Utilize all the old fashioned beds and plant everything in long rows so that most of the cultivation can be done with a horse. There need not be an unpleasant amount of hard hand work if properly worked with a horse and cultivator. Provide plenty of room at the ends to turn around with the horse while cultivating.

Do not plan a larger garden than you can keep clean and well tilled. A small garden will supply an abundance of small vegetables for a large family. After the soil has been well enriched and well tilled we are ready to plant. If the plan has been well worked out all that is necessary is to plant each variety at the proper time in its right place.

The family garden must be planned to suit the needs of the family, and no two families will agree as to the amount and kinds of vegetables they will grow.

VALUE OF CLEANING UP.

What One Western City Accomplished by a Co-operative Movement.

During a "cleaning up day" held in a certain western city one-tenth of the entire population gladly volunteered at the set time, and more dirt was scraped together than 4,000 teams were able to cart away. Men, women and children were among the workers.

From sunrise, when the bugle sounded assembly, until nightfall the work

AN IMPORTANT TYPE OF STREET SWEEPER.
 (From American City, New York.)

never halted for a moment. Every cubic yard of dirt meant the removal of a menace to health and comfort.

The city ordered also a thousand additional waste cans for the sidewalks. The spirit, the unity of action, was perhaps the greatest success of the day. Such civic spirit cannot but command success in the uplifting and constant progress of such a city or town.

Many towns and cities throughout the United States are doing everything possible to keep their streets neat and attractive. In numerous communities clubs of men and women are working in school yards, cleaning and beautifying, putting up fences, seats, drinking fountains, raising flags, laying cement walks and setting out flowers.

Some cities are installing garbage and street carts of an improved type which has a sweeper attachment and saves time, labor and money. Let other towns and cities fall into this more and eliminate the phrase "spotless town" and substitute "spotless country."

To End Rat Nuisance.

Systematic organized destruction of rats, in which every person in the community enters, will always keep the rats down in a locality and sometimes almost exterminate them.

Care in disposal of garbage.
 Care in protection of foods.
 Care in providing no entrance for the rats to the buildings.
 Careful, systematic, thorough work in trapping and poisoning.
 Careful training of a good rat terrier.
 Careful removal of all straw and hay piles, loose boards and trash.

How Trade Is Lost.

It is a sad reflection on retailing that so many cheap and flashy mail order houses can succeed in getting trade away from local dealers. It indicates a real lack either of good service and good goods at attractive prices or of the knowledge whereby they can be obtained locally.—Printers' Ink.

NITROGEN STARVATION.

Science of Dietetics Burdened With Many Absurd Fads.

It is high time that the science of dietetics should free itself of the burden of parasitic fads which have fastened themselves upon it. It is the black sheep in the flock of sciences which make up that greater science called "medicine," and it has been under a cloud long enough. Nothing is too absurd to be advocated, from a diet of peanuts to one of raw meat. For many years the real science of dietetics was content with a more study of what people were eating in all walks of life in every part of the world. It was sad enough to have the illogical conclusion once thrust upon us that these dietaries were necessarily correct without regard to the results as to vigor and immunity from disease. Indeed, no one seemed to think that the coolly ate rice because it was the only thing he could get and that he greedily ate better food whenever he had a chance.

When the real scientists took up the work of experimental dietetics it was with keen expectation that the modern profession looked forward to enlightenment, and the enlightenment we got was the new fad that we eat too much of the thing of which we are built—a fad which will destroy a nation as surely as it will destroy an army. Long before there was a science of dietetics Napoleon said that an army "travels on its stomach," and every other man who has ever had the management of bodies of workers has said that they work on their stomachs. And we can apply the same rule to the nation and to the whole race.—North American Review.

HOMES FOR WORKERS.

Novel Plan of Construction Devised by a South American.

Professor Pierre Roveda, an architect of Buenos Aires, has devised a special plan for the construction of whole districts of houses for the working classes, says the Scientific American. Instead of employing the usual square block as a unit, Professor Roveda adapts a circle varying in diameter from 100 to 130 yards. This circle of ground is subdivided into ninety-nine radial lots converging to a center. The circle is concentrically divided to form an interior avenue four yards broad to permit of communication with the center of the circle. Each avenue leads to external sidewalks and to longitudinal and transverse streets. In the center of the circle is a plot of forty yards in diameter, where children may be left to themselves without their parents' care, in charge of a specially designated person. In this garden a playground, a school, a hospital, a fire station and an administration room are to be found.

Naturally this circular plot of ground will leave four corners free. In each of these corners Professor Roveda intends to erect four chalets, such as grocery shops, dairies, haberdasheries and the like, which are to be conducted on a co-operative plan. In each of the ninety-nine radial plots a working-man's house is to be built on the English plan. It is argued that the circular arrangement will give continuous sunshine at all hours of the day and plenty of light and air.

The Stomach Telescope.

The "stomach telescope," or gastro-scope, invented at the London hospital last year has proved to be of the greatest value in the diagnosis of stomach disorders. An eminent surgeon recently referred in the highest terms to the advances lately made at that hospital in the early detection of diseases of the stomach by means of this instrument, which will in the immediate future probably come to be part of the equipment of every up-to-date hospital. The gastro-scope now enables the physician or surgeon to actually see for himself the exact condition of the whole of the interior of the stomach, the slightest ulceration, growth or other abnormality in the lining membrane being thus readily observed. To be able to do this is of the very greatest importance in suspected cancer of the stomach where the only hope of cure lies in the eradication of the cancerous growth at the very earliest moment.—London Telegraph.

Saving Coal by Superheating.

Lately the practice of superheating steam for locomotives has been resumed in Europe and England and with the aid of suitable lubrication is said to have given good results. The saving in coal consumption is estimated in England at 20 per cent, and a still higher economy has been claimed in Germany. In Italy the plan has been tried on the state railways with an economy of coal reckoned at 22.3 per cent. In addition, it is said that the trains run by superheated steam show a gain of 12.6 per cent in weight of load drawn and 9.6 per cent in speed as compared with trains run by saturated steam.—Youth's Companion.

ROOSEVELT RECEIVED BY KING GEORGE

His Arrival in London on Special Train Devoid of Any Demonstration.

London, May 17.—Theodore Roosevelt, special American ambassador to the funeral of King Edward VII, arrived in London on Monday, was received by King George at Marlborough house, and later visited the throne room in Buckingham palace, where the body of the late monarch is privately lying in state.

The entrance to the city of the distinguished American was a quiet one and in marked contrast with his appearance at other capitals and with what would have been made of the occasion here, but for the demise of the British ruler.

It was Whit-Monday holiday, but despite this fact the popular crowd at Victoria station was a small one. There was no cheering, but as Mr. Roosevelt alighted from the train and was escorted by American Ambassador Whitelaw Reid to the royal carriage, which had been sent for him, those who looked on silently lifted their hats.

The Roosevelt party, which included Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Roosevelt and Kermit left Berlin at noon Sunday, and reached Flushing, Holland, at midnight. They continued upon the regular boat to Queensborough, Eng., where a special train was in waiting for them which preceded the regular express to London, arriving at Victoria station 15 minutes earlier than the regular train, which followed arriving at 7.45 a. m.

At Queensborough, Mr. Roosevelt was joined by the aides-de-camp appointed to attend upon him by King George. Lord Dundonald, and Commander Charles E. F. Cunningham-Graham, and by Vice Admiral Sir George Neville, commanding a division of the home fleet, who received the ex-President in the name of the king.

The transfer to the special was quickly made and at 6 a. m. the party proceeded for this city, which was reached at 7.30. It had been supposed that Mr. Roosevelt would arrive on the regular train and this fact may have accounted in part for the comparatively small crowd at the station.

No Music, No Flags, No Applause.

Upon the station platform awaiting the Roosevelts were Ambassador Reid and Mrs. Reid, the other members of the American embassy and their wives, all dressed in mourning. Consul General Griffiths and the staff of the consulate, Robert J. Wynne, formerly U. S. consul general at London, Ogden Mills Reid, son of the ambassador, and a small group of American residents here. There was no music, waving of flags or other demonstration.

When greetings had been exchanged Lord Dundonald escorted the Roosevelts and Ambassador and Mrs. Reid to the royal carriages, which had been placed at their disposal by the king, and they were conveyed at once to Dorchester house, the home of the ambassador. Later, accompanied by Mr. Reid, Mr. Roosevelt, in the capacity of special American ambassador, visited the king at Marlborough house.

Following the reception by the monarch he was escorted to Buckingham palace and was shown into the throne room, where, upon the catafalque, reposes the body of King Edward. Mr. Roosevelt was accompanied to the palace by Mrs. Roosevelt and the members of the American embassy with their wives.

The Victoria station is closely picketed and patrolled by the police. Every entrance and exit is guarded and all applicants for admission are scrutinized. This precaution is taken for the protection of all the members of royalty and other official representatives who are coming here for the funeral.

In the course of the forenoon Mr. Roosevelt called on the duke and duchess of Connaught at Clarence house.

King Manuel Leaves Portugal.

Lisbon, May 17.—King Manuel left Monday for London to attend the funeral of King Edward.

Mr. Littleton is in Europe having sailed for London last week on a business trip. Beyond saying that no further court proceedings were possible, Mr. Littleton's representatives said they did not care to make any statement on the case at this time.

MRS. CANAVAN

Aged Woman Was Laid to Her Last Rest Today

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah B. Canavan was held this noon in the chapel at O. W. Han's undertaking rooms. Rev. Harold M. Folsom conducted the service. She was laid to rest in South cemetery.

Mrs. Canavan's maiden name was Sarah D. Grant, and she was born in Portsmouth eighty-three years ago, the daughter of Samuel and Mary (Tarleton) Grant. In the years before the civil war she became a noted tragedienne and was seen in many American theatres in classic roles. She married a man named Goss, and after his death married Richard Canavan. She and her husband were among the northern people caught in the south at the time of the rebellion, and he was conscripted into the Confederate army where his life ended on a battlefield.

She stayed in Richmond and became convinced for her outspoken advocacy of the Union cause. When the Confederates had evacuated Richmond, she was one of those left behind, and her welcome to the northern commander, Grant, has been many times described in print as one of the notable affecting scenes of the war.

In her late years she lived almost alone on Salter street, having no near relatives and being cared for by friends. After several months of paralysis she was taken to the Cottage hospital two weeks ago, and there the end came on Monday.

AT NAVY YARD

Calls for Thirty-Eight Workmen

Marines and Sailors to Help Keep Memorial Day

Navy Will Do Its Part

Rear Admiral Joseph Foster and Captain J. Albert Sanborn, representing the Storer Post, No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, were at the navy yard today arranging matters with the station commandant, Captain F. A. Wilner and the commanding officers of the Wisconsin, New Hampshire and Marietta relative to Memorial day exercises, and were assured that the navy would be well represented. Five companies of marine guard are expected to be in line besides a good number of sailors from the ships, with the assistance of the coast artillery, Grand Army, Spanish American war veterans, Sons of Veterans, and other patriotic organization, the day in Portsmouth will be well observed.

Two Divisions Call for Help

Thirty-eight men were called today for duty. The list included sixteen all around machinists, sixteen machinists' helpers and six pipefitters. The call was issued for help in both machinery and hull divisions.

Back With the Hull Division

Quartermaster Franklin Bond of riggers and laborers, who went to the machinery division when the last consolidation took place, has been assigned to duty in the hull division.

Several Yard People to Hear the Talk

A number from the yard will attend the illustrated talk on the trip around the world to be given by Baudmaster M. J. Devine at the Catholic Union hall on Wednesday. There is no admission and everybody is welcome.

Taking a Rest

Wilford Trearlin, electrical machinist, is enjoying a furlough from his duties at the central power plant.

Not as Good Soldier as Percy

The members of the marine guard at the barracks are decidedly proud of one of their members, the young St. Bernard pup, the pride of the post. They say, however, that he will not make as good soldier as their old comrade, the Irish setter, Percy.

Six from the South

Six court martial men from the Norfolk yard arrived for the Southern today.

On Sick List

William R. Kelley of the machinists' crew is restricted to his home by illness.

Now Settled By Bureau

Claims for the reimbursement of traveling expenses, formerly a bugbear to officers and civilian inspectors owing to the delay in settlement in the office of the auditor for the navy department, are now settled by the bureau of supplies and accounts within a day of their presentation. The arrangement recently made, whereby the treasury department consented to allow preliminary settlement by the bureau of supplies and accounts, has worked excellently. On an average four claims a day are paid, aggregating $5,000 a month in value.

What the Skipper Says Goes

The skipper of the Yeast Cake today ordered out the fly screens and electric fans regardless of the protest of his crew, who declared that this expensive raffle will be missing when the real hot season is on.

A LIVELY SPAT

Black Paint Comes in Handy for the Finishing Touches

The climax to a lively scrap between two youngsters on Sheafe street on Monday afternoon was the handiwork of one of the pair in painting the other with black paint, which he found in a rubbish barrel.

The youngest certainly appeared as an Indian when he got back home.

FIREGRAPHS

Some of the members of the fire department are pleased that there is a move to build a central fire station.

No doubt one is badly needed and we hope this move is not a flash in the pan.

But the idea of centralizing the apparatus is all wrong and should not be thought of for a moment.

Some of the apparatus will look a little rusty if called on to parade on July 4, especially the ladder truck. It was hoped that a new truck would be in service by that time, but that is out of the question.

The Portsmouth correspondent of the Freeman's Standard says it's a wonder that our board of health has not condemned No. 3 house as unsanitary and not a fit place for men to sleep. How about that central station on Hanover street?

One of the features of old home week will be an exhibition of the fire department's life net. The heavy weight of engine 4 will do the jumping act.

If a new central station should be built on Court street that central station on Hanover street could be disposed of. It has outlived its usefulness, first as a chapel, then a school, and for the past twenty years a fire station. The writer can remember it as a chapel, and with its surroundings, it was an ornament, more so than at present.

There seems to be a new move in the department in regard to who shall be in charge in the absence of the board of engineers. It has been the rule in years past in the absence of all of the engineers that the first captain to arrive at a fire would be in charge until relieved by a superior officer.

Nobody Should be Overlooked in the Matter of Old Home Day

The people of this city should get busy and send the names of former residents to the committee, if they would like them to be among those who will return with the sons and daughters on July 4.

When you can go into the kitchen, light the gas and in five minutes have everything boiling, then it's a pleasure to cook. No dirt, smoke or soot; no heat, except at the burner, which as there is practically no radiation, amounts to nothing.

To tell the truth, lady, we think any woman is foolish to swelter over a hot cook stove. And if you only knew how little it costs to do all your work with gas, we don't believe you'd put up without it another day. Why not come in and let us tell you about it.
